

DYETT HIGH SCHOOL, CHICAGO STUDIO

We believe that good design serves the greater good — it can enhance the quality of life for all, not just the privileged few — yet too many members of our communities are not participating in the design process or being exposed to professional opportunities in design.

In 2018, Archeworks launched Chicago Studio, a design education program for high school students. We will teach, mentor and inspire students on the role of design in improving peoples' lives.

We want Chicago's youth to see that design can make radical and tangible transformations in Chicago, in their community, and in their lives.

ABOUT ARCHEWORKS

Since 1994, Archeworks mission is to use the power of design to challenge social, cultural and environmental challenges in Chicago. We do this by providing educational programs and creating collaborative design projects with our students, our members and the people of the communities we serve. Through our vast network of industry experts, civic leaders, award winning practitioners and successful social entrepreneurs, our students are given the tools and access to make a difference in the world, and the accountability to do so.
